		Expected outcome	A good number of graduate teachers working in various English, as a medium of instruction, is a universally accepted phenomenon. Careful observation of the recruitment advertisements for teaching staff in various schools, colleges and Universities clearly depicts that the Master's Degree in English is one of the most job-oriented degrees. A good command of English language in oral communication and reading comprehension is not only necessary for those who want to take up teaching as a career but equally important for those who prepare for Civil Services and other competitive examinations both at the national and regional level. The outcome of PG English Program is to acquaint the learners with different genre of English literature through different literary periods and trends. Besides, honing their four skills, learners have a variety of professional avenues including journalism, media, teaching, research assistants, translators, anchor, newsreader, interpreter, content writer, publisher, proof reader, editor, to choose as career.
